The Odin left Nagasaki on the 20th ult., at nine p.m., with a cargo of Takasima coal. She had fine weather on leaving, and the next afternoon bearings were taken, and they were then found to be about E. & E., 28 miles distant from Amakusa Island, which was the last land sighted until just before the dimester. The weather continued very favourtible until Tuesday, the 23rd, at noon of which day it became very thick. About an hour ofterwards, however, the fog cleared away to some extent, but though they could see a good distance ahead, it was still hazy. This state of things continued during the night, and the captain was able to see the lights on the fishing boats. Between half past five and six o'clock, however, the steamer ran into a dense fog, which was so thick that they could not see the ship's length away from them. HONGKONG CLUB V. THE "AMOY" TEAM. The return match between the Wanderers and Stay-at-Homes was played on Saturday, when the good effects of a sea voyage and the excellent corn at Amoy were plainly apparent the form of the voyagers improving several stone so they administered a severe drubbing to their former conquerors. The Club team winning the tuss went first to the wickets, but a succession of disasters made and havor with the earlier wickets, Dormor was bowled first ball, and 6 wickets were down for 18 rans. On D'Aeth and Hodder becoming associated a better stand was made and the innings ultimately finished for exactly the century.

The "Amoy" men bogun the batting with Rice and Hawkins. The Banker did a roaring business while he was at it, long hops and half volleys being lisconnted freely until he returned one to Birch and the left-hander again proved a thorn in the his innings, but after that played such excellent cricketthat the only thing his enemies wished was that he was a right hand man. The next wicket was distinguished by the number of catches given and missed; our correspondent counted five. The Stumper was unlucky, but the "Nephew" came out in grand form, his boldness in running out to meet her was astonishing, considering there was no wicket keeper, but altogether his performance was the best we have seen from him on this ground and hope it is a return to his prepar form. The bowling by this time was shocking, F. H. O. Wilson's "Yorkers," so telling in the first mutch being eadly missed, so the remaining batsmen all put on a few and at the

BEFORE MR. H. E. WODEHOUSH.

Wong Achow, coolie, was charged with having burglariously entered No. 280, Queen's Road West, and stolen therefrom four dried ducks on the 2nd inst. .The defendant effected an entrance to the louse from the staircase by making an opening in the partition. The occupants having been aroused, the man seems to have dropped dried ducks he had taken, and made off, but he was caught at the foot of the stairs.

Convicted of breaking into the promises with months' hard-labour. THE DRUGGING CABE.

The five Chinamen charged with having administered a sleeping drug to a woman, named Mak Aho, for the purpose of committing a felony, were brought before the court on remand. It will be remembered that six men went to the complainant's house and had suppor provided, including some congee. They all went to the not want the congee, and offered it to the other people in the house-three women-who ato the conges, and became stupified very shortly after. the complainant being so much affected as to render her removal to the hospital for a time advisable. The house was robbed while the women were insensible, and the prisoners were afterwards apprehended by Inspector Quincey, who found a small part of the stolet property in the place where he arrested the men. The case was remanded to enable an analysis to be made of a small amount of the congee found in the pot, and of half a boins and a small bottle of flaid found where the prisoners were arrested. McCallum, the Government Analyst, now stated that he found a small trace of some narcotic drug in the congee, but the below and phial contained no percetic. Dr. Wherry, the Superintendent of the Hospital, also proved that the complainant was suffering from poison when admitted to the hospital. The third prisoner was identified as having been convicted of piracy and sent to senal servitude for three years in 1879, and fifth was also stated to have been convicted of

The evidence as to the identity of the second prisoner having failed, he was discharged, and the rest were committed for trial at the Supreme Court, defence being reserved.

The complainant gave some strange tale about having been carrying water to the house the defendant came up to him, asked him what he was doing, and then kicked him in the back. This kick, though it did not burt his back, by some unexplained process, sprained his knee. There was no corroboration of this story, and the defendant said he simply ordered the man to get some water, and as he disobeved he took him by the shoulder and repeated the order. the Tao-t'si of Shanghai is still upon the warpath. We hear that the latter official has been very busy lately in writing despatches to the Consular body on various subjects, and that the latest enterprise be has undertaken is the suppression of all hongs in which Chinese proprietorship is said to be voiled under a foreign name, or in which Chinese and foreigners trade on joint account. It remains, to be seen what steps the Consuls will take in this matter. The Tho tal seems profuse in his assurances that adopts all these measures most unwillingly, and that he is simply obeying orders from head-quarters. We are in a position to state that in many instances the orders he receives came not from Tso, but from Li Hung-chang. VISIT TO THE SAVAGES IN FORMOSA.

The following ha a continuation and conclu-

The 26th, of February, early in the morning, preparing for the expedition. Four savages had been brought out the day before, two (the chief and another) to conduct me into the forest, and two to be retained as hostages. " Hawk-ave" and the savages having loaded their matchlooks and lighted their fuses buckled on my trusty steel (a savage knife 19 inches long), shouldered my gun, and off we started from the midst of an admiring throng. First went the object. I came next, then "Hawl eye," then my sorvant; and the other savare brought up the rear. The path at once began a steep ascent, winding along some very awkword places; at one spot the recent heavy rains had washed away one balf, and I had once more to elew the rocks. At length, after a tough we gained the top of a ridge, and there sheld a sight indeed; monatains all round in every direction, those in front one dense mass of forest. The day was gloomy; heavy banks of dark clouds brooded over the sidges, ferming a kind of pall, and the forest looked perfectly We were standing on the outskirts of civilisation, had passed the last patches of indigo, had seen the last sod of virgin soil that had been turned, and now we had to descend and enter the wilderness. By degrees the path, which hitherto had been little to ! boast of, became small and beautifully less, and at last jungle appeared—masses of reads, grass, and other plants 10 to 15 feet high, and as dense as a wall. When approaching this place the pose to make me familiar with the approach to chief blew a small reed whistle, and then raised | their forest home. At about 6 p.m. we reached peopliar and melanoholy wall, which resounded through the forest. The women and girls carry their pipes of bamboo stuck in their hair, somewhat in the style of the lianguat out hoaddress of the Pekingese ladies, and keep the tobacco-bags hung round their necks; they at once offered me a smoke. Some of them were playing upon a curious kind of jew's-harp, made ont of a slip of bamboo, with threads at each end, whilst one girl, of about 16, danced, The dance was neither a fandange por a belere, nor yet a minuet, but here some resemblance to all three; it was so intensely grotesque that l laughed uncontrollably. No sooner had she finished than the girls came up to me, and offering me a jew's-harp, made signs to me to dance. The barp alone was a sufficient mystery to me. but when the minuet was added, the tableau was complete; my audience threw themselves down and screemed with laughing. From this performance I passed to a seene of somewhat different character; a few yards along a path, a step to one side, and I stood before a scaffold of campher branches on which roposed a grinning row of buman skulls, the heads of Chinese slain in raids. But the day were on, and the preparations for journeying back were made.

We returned by a different route, and if there was no mountain river to be forded there was something worse-the arosaing of ravittes and gullies on slimy trunks of fallau trees. Then. found me once more in " Hawk-eye's " cottage sgain, we would throu "Watercourses, where the vegetation was londed with moisture, and the glen-a vast fornery-was dark through the interlacing of the trees above. We had gradually ascended so high that we were in the clouds, which made the forest doubly dark. The chief, as before, went first, and his wailing call once more conged around. Presently the rest joined in it, and I was told that we were approaching a stockade of the savages, close by which we passed. At length we gained a ridge and changed our direction, plunging down steep and dark declivities. The scene was often highly interesting and romantic. Sometimes at a projecting battress I would pause and look back at the line of savages winding single file round the pracipices, and be ulling the way with a sweet and musical chant, which I was told was a sort of ditty addressed to lover or husband hunting far off in the forest, I have crossed Formesa 30 miles, with the thermometer 92 o in the shade I have topped the Wat'ai-khan, 10,000 feet; and I have tramped the sands and lavafields of Hainan under a tropical sun. 35 miles in a day; but let no one talk of walking till he has been through the forests of Formosa with the savages.

-I had been rather annoved at the way in which the old chief parsiated in going ahead, but I afterwards learned that he did this by way of precaution against surprise. The choice of a dit ferent route for the return journey, also, bad been made because the wary savages did not prothe cottage, after a day of great and varied incoming.
